

I am a Wisconsin citizen and fully support Wisconsin's no-call list law. I oppose any changes to it that would weaken it or create loopholes for telemarketers to exploit. The State of Wisconsin has the strictest law in the nation, and it is a model that other states have adopted. The Federal Communications Commission may have interstate jurisdiction, but it cannot stretch itself to monitor and prosecute every violator. By allowing states like Wisconsin to enact their own strong legislation, the FCC will benefit from cooperation with the states. Furthermore, by weakening Wisconsin's no-call law, the FCC will allow ill-intended telemarketers to exploit the law and prey upon unsuspecting citizens. I have had many quiet evenings at home as a result of Wisconsin's law, and have not needed to deal with overzealous salespeople. Therefore, I ask that you uphold and maintain the integrity of Wisconsin's no-call list.